

What is the most adequate container to transport your pet using MRW Pets Service?

An adequate container to transport your pet using MRW Pets Service must fulfill at least the following characteristics:

Must allow for sufficient movement of the animal(s) transported. In the case of dogs and cats, they must be able to stand up and turn around without difficulty.
If two or more animals travel together, they must be able to turn and lie separately, without stepping on each other.

Containers must be made of a rigid and resistant material:

Depending on the animal transported, the container may be a metal bar cage, a rigid PVC kennel, a wooden box with ventilation grilles...

In addition, the container must be strong enough to carry the animal in question.

A fabric or canvas pet bag IS NOT ADEQUATE since it does not protect your pet in the case of movement between kennels or cages during the journey.

It must have sufficient ventilation but not allow the animal to escape or get hurt by sticking out its paws or head through the ventilation grilles.

It must have a rigid base.

Please contact your nearest MRW office for full information, requirements and help choosing the most adequate container for your pet.

If you do not have a suitable container, you can purchase a PVC kennel and/or hire a metal cage in any MRW office.
